❋ Freerunner

-"What's the hold up? Why aren't we moving yet?"

Description:

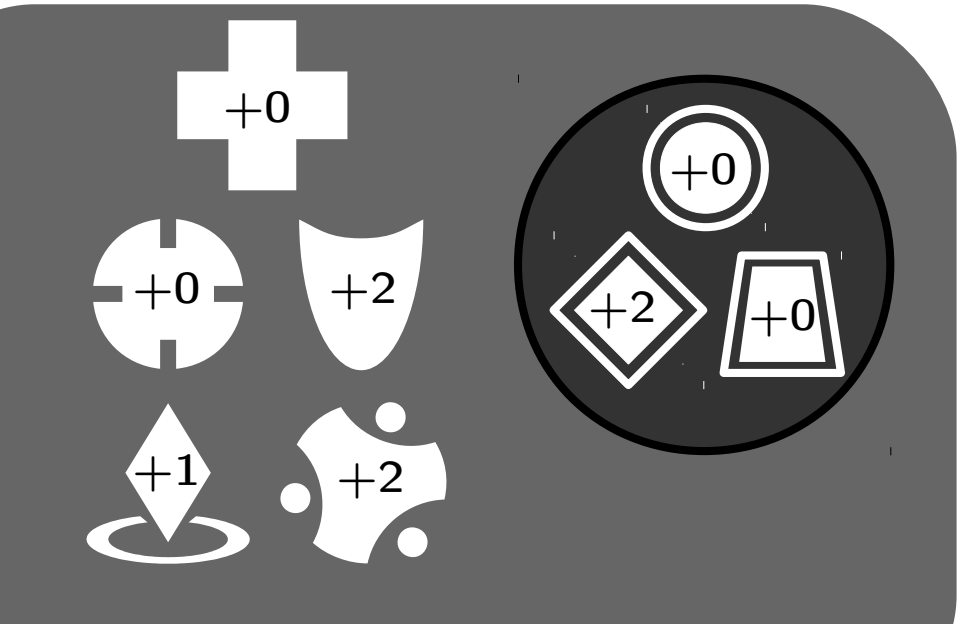

Whether climbing to the rooftops or leaping between them, the city is your playground. A mixture of skill and endurance, the Freerunner school of abilities allow you to navigate mountainsides and battlefields, surefooted and unafraid.

Strategy:

As a freerunner, your job is to be team scout, skill monkey, and logistics officer. When the team encounters obstacles you are expected to find a way over, under or around them; other skill classes such as ranger or infiltrator can help with this. In combat, you are the one team member who can get anywhere on the battlefield – make use of that. Position dependent combat classes such as Mender, Bodyguard or Swordfiend are right up your alley.

Starting Bonuses:

- ☐ +1 attack when unarmed.
- ☐ +4 Agility, +2 in all other physical skill checks.
- ☐ +2 Entertain, Perception.
- ☐ Gain +8 knowledge places when navigating your hometown.
- ☐ +1 Reaction per round.
- ☐ Equipment: A sealed messenger capsule, not yet delivered. You gain a free Freerunner feat upon successful delivery.

Character details:

Your home town (or space station) is: _____

Your running style is (circle up to two):

Showy	Graceful	Powerful	Precise
Fluid	Playful	Jagged	Meditative
Helter-Skelter	Energetic	Efficient	_____

Answer one (or more) of the following backstory details.

What object or message are you currently midway through delivering? To whom? Why has it not been delivered already? Are you on your journey, or currently waylaid or sidetracked? _____

Have you ever been forced to leave someone behind- someone who could not run as fast? Who were they? What were you running from? What happened? _____

Describe a situation in which you (literally) ran into one of your team-mates. What were you doing at the time? Ask them what they were doing. _____

Athlete

Each level you gain one "athletics" skill rank. It can only be spent on physical skills, but can overlap normal skill ranks, allowing you to double rank a skill (but not triple rank).

Tricking

Each level, check off one of the skills listed below. You gain +5 on skill checks to:

- ☐ Jump across chasms, between rooftops.
- ☐ Vault over (or under) fences. Maintain speed despite obstacles. (Agility)
- ☐ Balance beams, slack lines, etc. (agility)
- ☐ Long distance running. (Endurance)
- ☐ Sprint through crowds, vanish into crowds, follow people through crowds, etc.
- ☐ Climb buildings & urban structures.
- ☐ Climb rocks, trees, natural structures.
- ☐ Assist allies with climbing (strength)
- ☐ Ropework, abseiling, etc. (survival, dexterity)
- ☐ Sky dive, wing suits etc (agility, zero-g)
- ☐ Hover boards, rollerblades, etc. (agility,piloting)
- ☐ Anything else your GM agrees to.
- ☐ _____
- ☐ _____
- ☐ _____

Old Boots

Requires: Flow & Playground

When wandering town alone at night, your feet have a knack of taking you where you are needed; be it a kidnapping attempt, a roof near an inventor's workshop, or a quiet dockside bar. Generally speaking these wanderings will involve two skill checks to get to your location (often perception, plus one other: agility, places, stealth, squirm, etc.).

Once at your location, small encounters may be handled by you and your GM between sessions. If you find something more serious, you may wish to call your team. If you do, the next game session will pick up at the moment of your call.

Runner's Vision

You gain +6 on all perception checks made to find a side entrance, security flaw, ingress, get away route, etc. (These routes may require substantial amounts of balance, agility or risk).

This City is My Playground

Whenever navigating a city or space station, gain +3 Knowledge Places for each of the following which you can check off in that town:

- I've used 3 different modes of transport.
- I've stayed out exploring past 3am.
- I've completed a mission here.
- I've taken part in a chase scene.
- I've built up a base of operations
- I've discovered a secret location.
- I have managed to change this city.

The bonuses from this ability do not stack on top of your hometown bonus. Instead, in your hometown, the first three bullet points are already achieved as part of your backstory.

Groundwork

Requires: Runners Vision & Playground

Spiderwork ain't just a matter of getting out there and seeing things: it's also a matter of setting things up. Whenever you roll 25 or higher on knowledge places, your GM will tell you what you know of the place (as usual), and then you get to describe some piece of groundwork you've installed in advance.

Examples include: a deadbolt unlocked from the inside on a previous jaunt, a nearby cache of useful equipment, a route planned out that follows the shadows, a zipline connected from a neighbouring roof, or perhaps you've paid off the local street urchins to keep watch on your behalf.

The higher your roll, the heavier the preparations you can have available.

Duck and Weave

Gain a +1 defense bonus for each beat spent moving during your last turn.

Dodging through combat and moving past enemies never prompts Attacks of Opportunity.

Tumble

If you are ever knocked over, you can return to your feet at the beginning of your turn without spending actions or prompting AoO.

Whenever you fall you may ignore the first 2d6 damage worth of damage (eg 3d6 → 1d6).

If damage is reduced to zero, you automatically succeed at agility checks for your landing.

Gain a +5 bonus to stealth checks needed to mitigate the noise of landings.

This ability also applies when jumping from cars, or other fast moving objects.

Flow

Requires: Duck And Weave

Whenever rolling multiple physical checks one after the other as part of a climb, chase or other 'run', each consecutive success grants +2 on the next skill check (hence, if you pass three in a row, the fourth is made at a +6 bonus).

This bonus reduces back to zero whenever you fail a skill check and stumble. When rolling physical checks for non-parkour activities this bonus accumulates +1 per success instead.

Fleet Movement

Requires: three freerunner feats

In combat, halve the amount of time it would take you to get anywhere (If the GM says four beats, instead you can get there in two).

Out of combat, gain a +4 bonus on all skill checks required to get somewhere quickly.

Double this bonus if you are racing against a known deadline (doomsday device, critical council vote, etc). This doubling applies as long as there IS an imminent deadline, even if you don't know its precise timing.